The Tangible Business Benefits of Using Color in Your Labels

Customers form opinions quickly, and color dominates those judgments:

90 seconds

The time it takes for people to form impressions of people or products.¹

62-90%

of that initial assessment is based on color.¹

This guide explores five ways color labels can help businesses improve profit potential, highlight safety concerns, and streamline logistics for more successful business outcomes. Read on to see how color can help bring your labels – and your business – to life.

Grocery & Convenience Stores

Establish a premium feel and quality cues at first glance.

Retail

Call out key search elements in color to help customers find exactly what they're looking for.

Shelf Tags

Draw attention to your products on crowded shelves with vibrant, branded shelf tags.

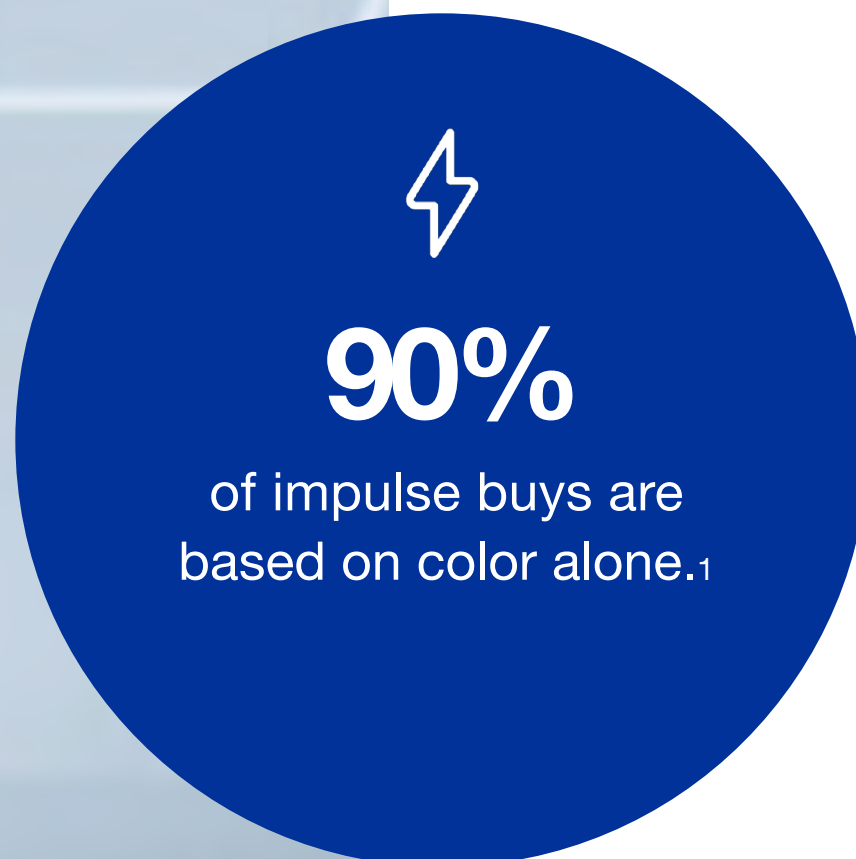

The ROI of Color

Attract customers to your products with color for deeper customer engagement that can help improve financial returns.

Build Purchase Consideration and Customer Retention

Incorporating color can shape how customers perceive a brand and interact with its products. Clear, visually appealing labels help communicate quality, build trust, and strengthen emotional connection. With full color shipping and to-go labels, businesses can add logos, coupons, even links to customer reviews — helping to keep customers connected and coming back.

Shipping Labels

Offer a hard-to-miss discount code to encourage repeat purchases.

To-Go Labels

Make it easy for customers to engage with your business post-purchase and come back for more.

Retail

Highlight time-sensitive seasonal offerings or new product announcements.

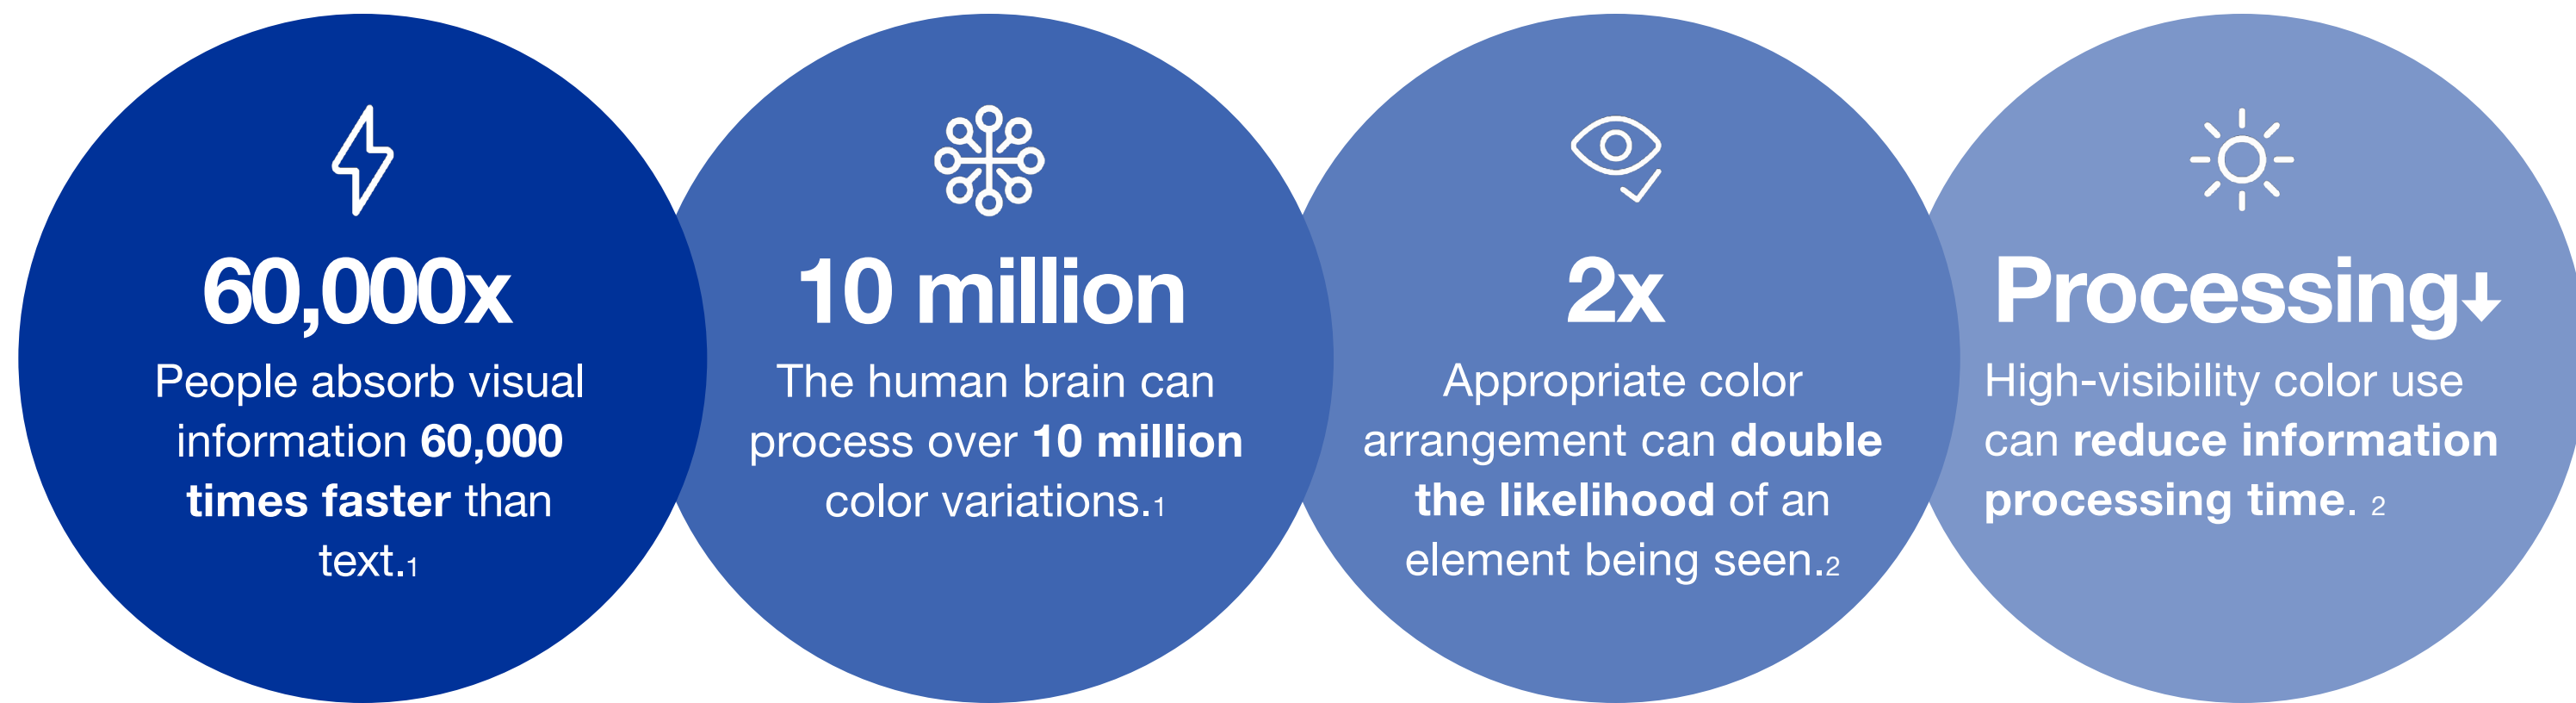

The ROI of Color

Turn black and white labels into colorful marketing mechanisms that can help strengthen customer loyalty and boost value.

Improve Information Clarity and Make It Easy to Read

Color creates visual hierarchy — helping complex information make sense fast. Used intentionally, it can separate categories, highlight priorities, and make labels easier to scan and interpret accurately. The right use of color on your labels can help your customers quickly “get it”... and get to “yes.”

Color can do more than attract attention. Use it to help improve scanability.

Pharmacy

Help patients and caregivers easily find and read important instructions.

Visitor Badges

Make it easy for staff to quickly identify authorized personnel, contractors, and other guests.

Warehouse & Logistics

Streamline inventory management with color-coded zones, shelving, and bins.

The ROI of Color

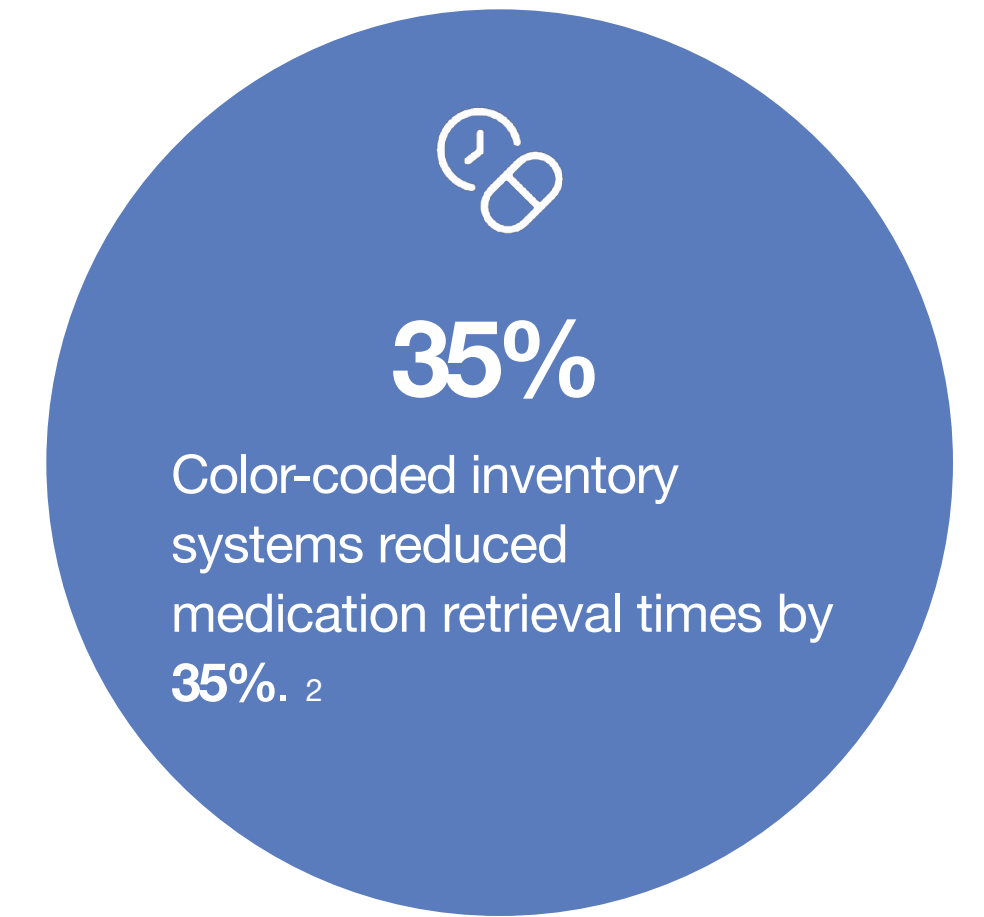

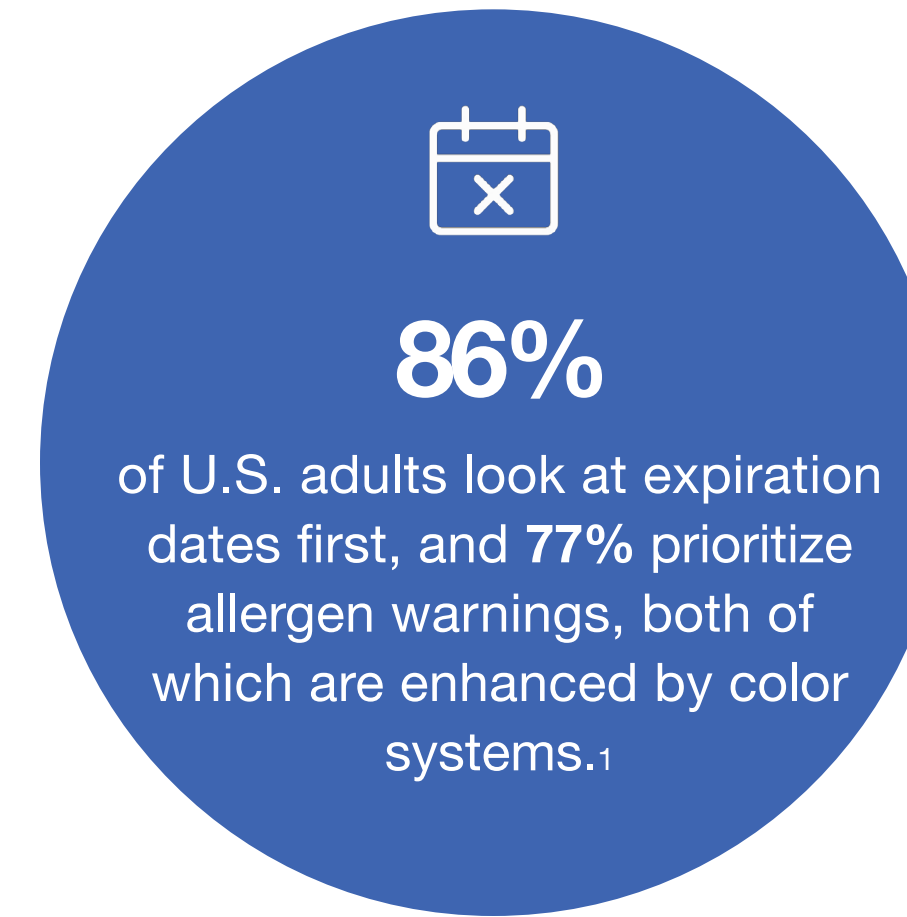

Highlight important information with color to improve finding, sorting and differentiating labels, badges and products faster and more effectively.

04 Simplify Warnings and Safety Information

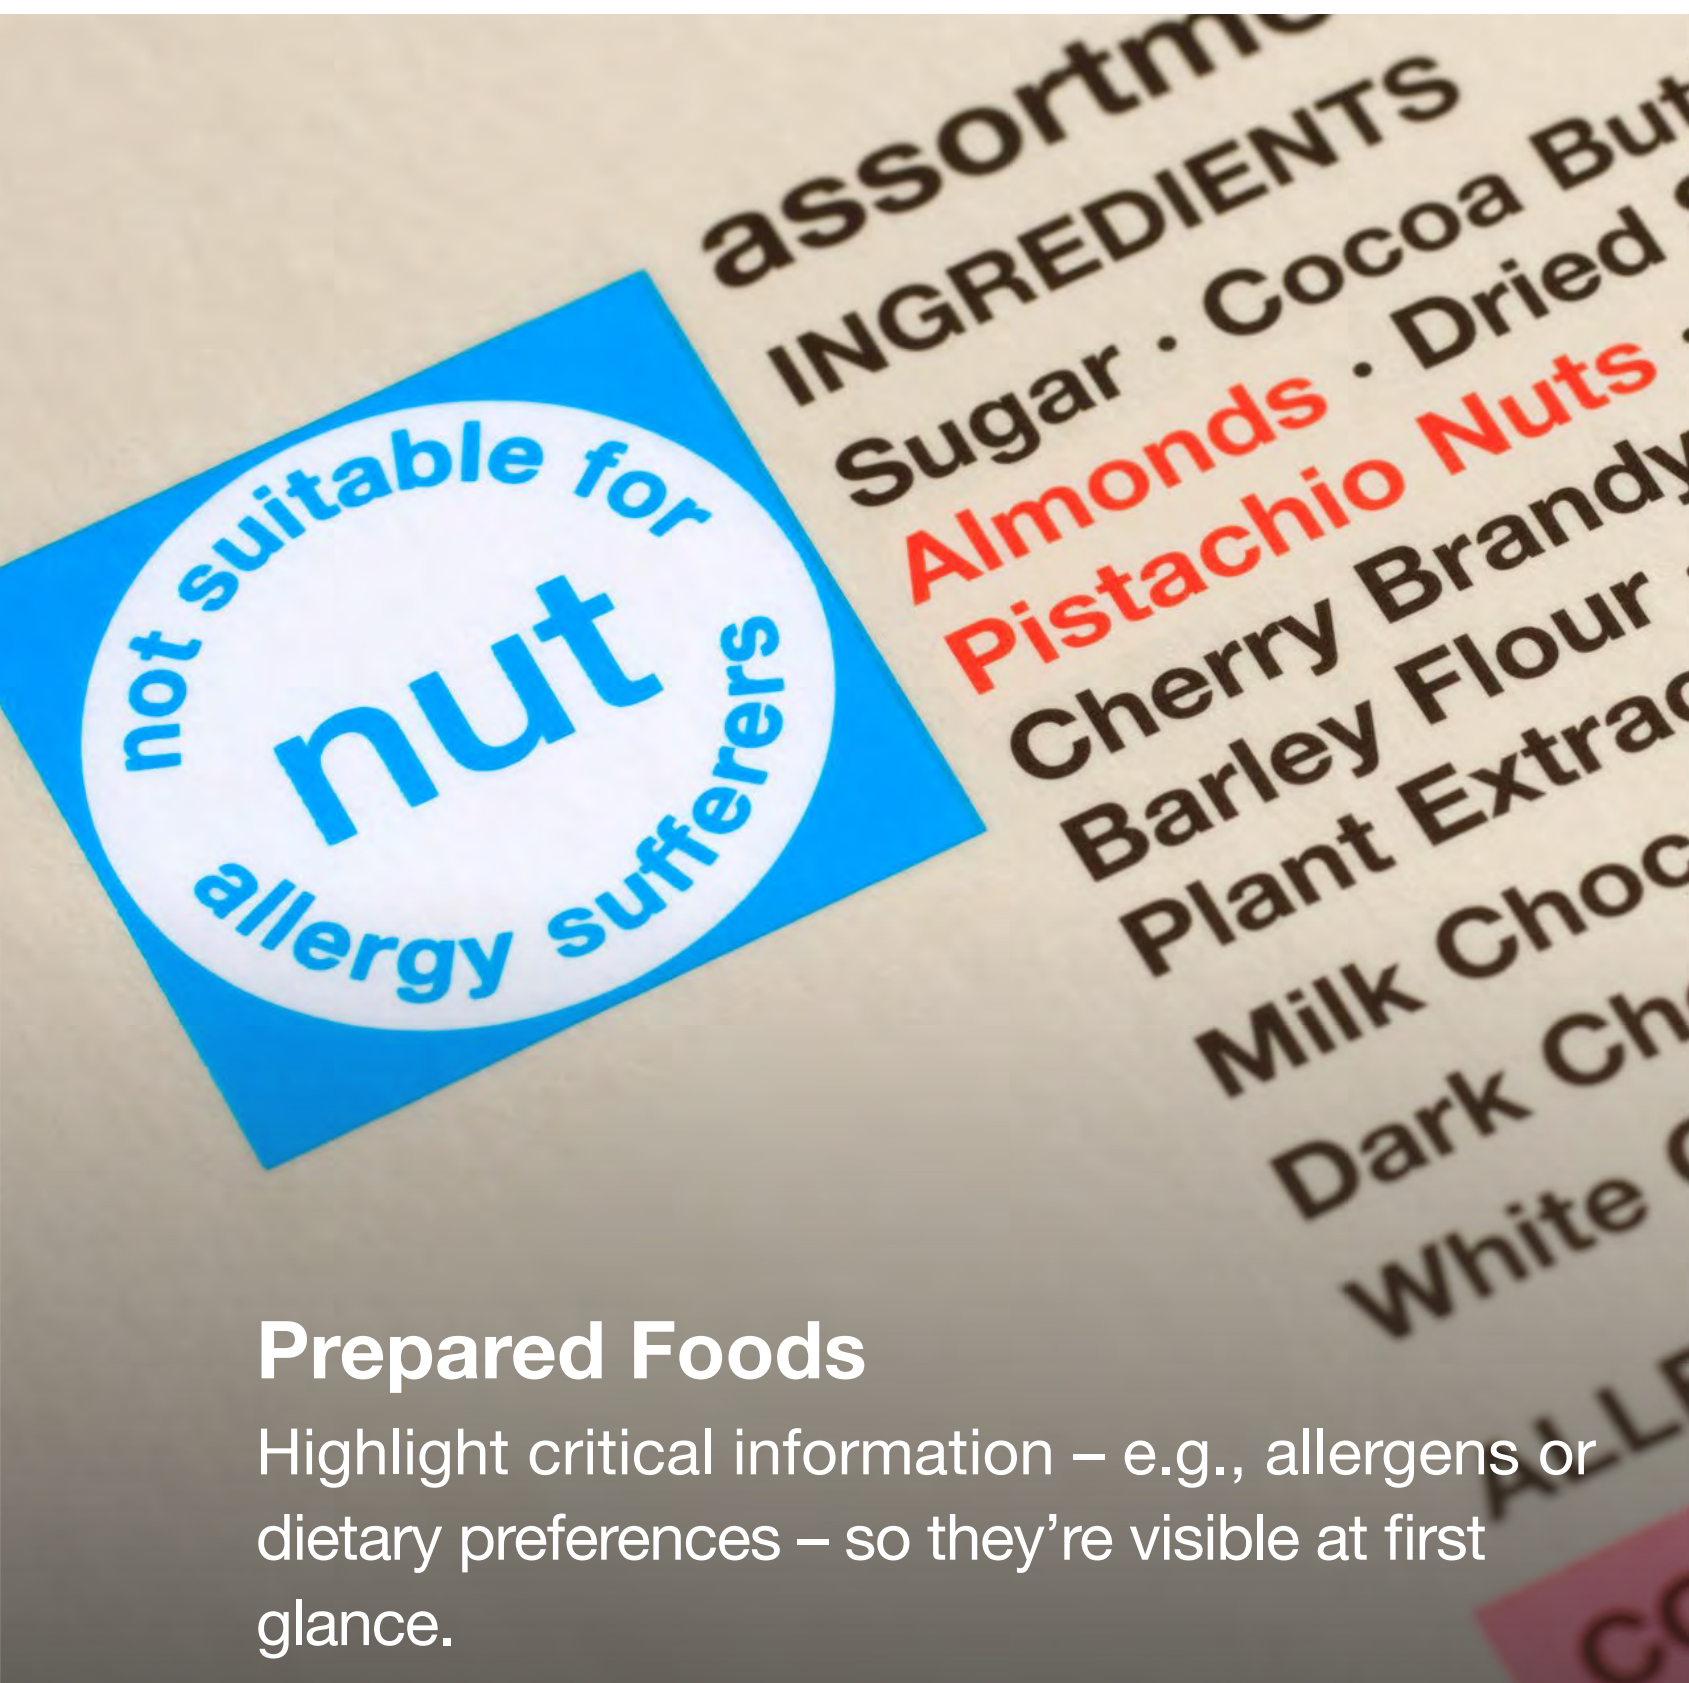

Color isn't just about aesthetics — it's a critical communication tool. Clear, standardized use of color can help convey essential warnings and safety information – especially important on food and medication labels for quick, easy visual cues.

Epson ColorWorks printers not only make adding color to your labels easy, they also have other time and money-saving features, too.

1. Print only what's needed to reduce waste and storage costs. Enable new designs and color variations without committing to large pre-printed runs.
2. Update labels instantly to reflect new regulations, seasonal promotions, or variable data.
3. Distributed printing means you can print labels where you apply them, to help reduce wait times and logistical costs.

You can do all of this in one easy step — printing full-color, variable-data labels on demand, with no need for preprinted stock or overprinting.

Smart color. Simple process. Powerful results.

Color has always had the power to connect, clarify, and inspire — now, it's easier than ever to put that power to work for your brand or business.
